JITTERBUCK uses the BOOK

“WHY,” demanded Jitterbuck Jones balefully, “does everythin’ hafta happen ta me?”

As he spoke, he stared down into the impish face of three-year-old Chester Fleagle, who stared right back at him. Jit was about to make another remark when Mrs. Fleagle, Chester’s mother, hastened into the room.

“Now I’ll be gone a very short time,” she told Jit, “and I know you can handle Chester well. Just remember that he’s a sensitive child and needs special attention. If you have any problems, just consult this wonderful book! Oootchy-oootchy-kitchy!” she added to Chester. “Be a little darling while mother is gone!”

Mrs. Fleagle departed, leaving behind her a large red volume.

Chester, who had maintained a strict silence up to then, suddenly let out a terrific yelp and pointed to the staircase. “What’s the matter, kid?” Jit asked. “Wanna go downstairs?”

He started towards the staircase—and then it happened. That was a mighty invisible cord stretched across the top landing! Jit didn’t see it. He didn’t see much of anything as he tripped over the cord and went rocketing down the staircase, hitting every step twice.

“Ooh!” he moaned, feeling himself for broken bones. “Who tied that cord across th’ . . . hmm, I’m beginning ta guess!” His voice became coaxing as he crooned, “Chester? Where are you, Chester?”

Little Chester Fleagle was out in the garden, trampling on the flower bed. Jit advanced towards him, murder in his heart. “Oh, Chester . . .” he began. “Chester, did you . . . splt! Skrsh! Hey!”

In all his childish innocence, Chester had managed to turn the garden hose on Jitterbuck . . . full force! Jit was splashed from head to toe, soaked to the skin!

“Grrr!” he set his teeth. “Wait’ll I get dried up! I’ll take care of you!”

In the bathroom, he towelled himself briskly, planning what he would like to do to little Chester Fleagle. When he was as dry as he could get, Jit turned the knob on the bathroom door and, to his horror, found that someone had locked him in!

“Guess who!” he muttered grimly, balancing himself on the rim of the bathtub, preparatory to climbing out the window. “Sensitive little Chester Fleagle! Wait’ll I get out, just wait!”

When Mrs. Fleagle came home, a half-hour later, a happy sight met her eyes. There was Jitterbuck, swinging in the porch hammock, while little Chester sat quietly in a chair nearby.

“Oootchy-kitchy!” the fond mother greeted her little son. And to Jit, “Well! I can see you had no trouble at all! Did the book help? I always think ‘Understanding Baby’ is the most helpful volume!”

“You kin say that again!” Jit smiled. He was thinking fondly of the nice, thumping sound “Understanding Baby” had made when it had connected violently with little Chester Fleagle’s seat!

COOKIE and his MAGIC VIOLIN

THERE was a new student at Harelip High . . . and in Cookie's hair! Everybody was in an uproar about Alfredo Zucchini. He was wonderful, he was marvelous, he was the greatest teen-age violin virtuoso the world had ever seen!

"I think he's keen, Cookie," Angelpuss sighed. "Don't you think he's keen?"

"I think he's a long-haired drip!" Cookie grumbled. "It's enough ta make a character sick ta his stomach, the way everybody is carryin' on about that Alfredo Zucchini! What's he got that I haven't got, except a page-boy bob?"

"Hmph!" Angel snorted. "I might have known you'd say something like that! Why, you haven't got as much talent all over as Alfredo has in his pinky! And if it's all the same to you, I'll carry my own books home!"

Seizing the books from Cookie's nerveless grasp, Angelpuss Wither- spoon, his dream-girl with stardust, flounced off, without so much as a backward glance!

Cookie sat down on the curb and moaned. "All right," he said to himself, "I admit it! I'm jealous. Angel never looks at me th' way she does at that fiddler! I gotta do somethin' before she forgets my name, but what?"

As he asked himself that jackpot question, the answer came to Cookie with such blinding inspiration that he felt dizzy. "Wotta chump I am!" he exulted, running towards his house. "I'll play the violin too!"

Mom and Pop O'Toole could hardly believe their ears. Could this be their Cookie, pleading for violin lessons, promising to practice, painting a rosy future of stage and screen appearances? It was their Cookie . . . and he got his way!

Pop furnished the violin, Professor Andante furnished the lessons and Cookie O'Toole furnished shrill scrapings and horrible violin moanings that outraged the neighborhood.

So ghastly were the wails that wafted from Cookie's violin, that a committee of neighbors called on the O'Tooles with a request. "Would you please make him stop or move out of town?"

So earnest were Cookie's desperate efforts to play the violin like Alfredo Zucchini, that the rest of the gang rarely saw him, and when they did, the howls went up, "Whaddaya got in that case, Cook, a Tommy-gun?"

"It'd be better if it was! It makes sweeter music."

"When are ya givin' yer recital, Cook? I wanna leave town!"

"Hit me again, will ya? I kin still hear 'im!"

If it weren't for his deep and abiding love for Angelpuss, Cookie would have given up long ago. His folks would have been delirious!

Only his pal, Jitterbuck Jones, listened sympathetically as Cookie poured out his tale of woe in the Soda Jerkerie one afternoon.

"I'm tellin' ya, Jit, I'm dyin'!" Cookie almost sobbed. "Here I am slavin' over a hot fiddle an' all I can turp out is the sound of a pile of tin cans rattlin' down an incinerator! Angel is still givin' me the cold shoulder! She's got eyes only for Alfredo Zucchini, that . . . that . . ."

"Never mind, Cookie," Jit whispered. "Here he comes now!"

It was true. With his violin case tucked under his arm and a look of sublime indifference on his face, Alfredo Zucchini was entering the Soda Jerkerie!

To Cookie, this was the last straw. Here he was in person, the source of all of Cookie's misery. Assuming what he considered to be a Humphrey Bogart expression, Cookie arose and sauntered slowly over to Alfredo Zucchini.

"Hiya, tone-deaf!" he sneered.

Alfredo looked right over Cookie's head, wrinkled his nose, sniffed the air and said, "Something decaying in here?"

Cookie bristled and turned red. "How'd ya like that fiddle smashed over yer long bob?" he threatened, advancing on Alfredo.

"Hey, you two, break it up!" Jitterbuck ordered nervously. "Th' last time somethin' like this happened, we had-da buy a new window for th' Jerkerie. Here, supposin' I play ya some sweet music!"

Jit's nickel, dropped into the juke box, sent a hot platter spinning. Jit's feet, stirred by the music, started to dance. Alfredo watched in fascination as Jit performed. Almost as though it were wrung out of him, Alfredo spoke: "I wish I could dance like that!"

To Cookie, that remark was it! Terrific! The answer to everything! "Listen, Alf," he said warmly, "how'd ya like ta be a member of the gang? I'll teach ya the latest feet-beats an' everything! Whaddaya say?"

"You mean it?" Alfredo gasped. "Count me in! What's first?"

"First," Cookie answered, "ya gotta adopt our attitude towards women, which is treat 'em rough, give 'em the brush-off an act colder'n an ice cube!" As he spoke, he glanced furtively towards the door of the Jerkerie.

"I'll do it!" Alfredo vowed. "Now what?"

"Now I'll teach ya the secret dance step which is the sole private property of th' gang!" As Cookie broke into a dance, he kept looking at the door. His patience was soon rewarded.

With a whoosh of her new-look skirt, Angelpuss Witherspoon entered the Soda Jerkerie. Her eyes lit up as she saw Alfredo Zucchini. This was her chance to make his acquaintance!

Double malt in hand, she approached Alfredo and said sweetly, "Hello! I'm Angelpuss Witherspoon and I want to tell you how much I admire you!"

Cookie winked at Alfredo, who gave Angel a cold, beady eye. "Is that so?" he said ungraciously. "Well, that only proves what I suspected. Yer a first-class goon-girl! Goodbye now!"

Angel was mortified. Her first feeling of shock changed rapidly to an anger so violent, that she raised her double malt on high, tilted the glass and dumped the contents over Alfredo's head!

"Goodbye to you!" she snapped. "Coming, Cookie?"

Arm-in-arm, Angel and Cookie left the Soda Jerkerie. Life can be beautiful, Cookie thought. After a moment's silence, Angel said, "Cookie O'Toole, if you ever touch that violin again, I'll never speak to you! I never want to hear the word violin!"

"Oh, absolutely," Cookie beamed, promising. "How's for a concert or somethin' tonight?"

"Concert nothing!" Angel glared. "Let's go to the Bijou to see 'Romance For Two' . . . if you know what I mean!"

"I sure do!" said Cookie.

There can however, be no question that massage applied to the region of the HIPS can and does, reduce the amount of fatty deposits in this region".
